

WEEKLY WHISPER SCRIPT

August 16, 2010

Hi! It's LaRue here. My friend Bea Lovejoy recently told me something that her granddaughter Kyla said to her that I just had to share with you. The wisdom of children is so innocent that we would fair very well to listen with open hearts and expanded minds, rather than thinking that they are inexperienced or don't know anything. Sometimes what they have to say is clear and sometimes the wisdom is hidden behind their lack of vocabulary, but the message is indeed there.

This story is told as I recall it. I may not have the words exactly right, but the essence of the story remains.

"Mee Maw" Kyla said, "God is like a great big heart that is like a puzzle and we are all each a piece of the puzzle. You're a piece of the puzzle, I'm a piece of the puzzle and even animals are a piece of the puzzle. When all of the pieces of the puzzle come back together, God is going to be so happy!"

In essence she was talking about Oneness and the end of our perception of separation. Kyla gave a graphic illustration of what the sages have been speaking of for centuries, yet few have put in the most simplistic of terms.

If you have children around you, listen closely, they too may be speaking words of wisdom straight from the Whisper!
